The Sign of the Cross in the Nineteenth Century
 Jean-Joseph Gaume (1802 - 1879)
 Translated by A Daughter of St. Joseph

A book that examines the sign of the Cross made by Christians since the primitive church up until the 19th century. It looks at stories of miracles and the writings of the father to impress upon the reader the need to make the sign of the cross reverently and frequently. (Summary by dom. Noah Moerbeek CPMO)

I have mocked up a version of code on my development system to get this working. Happy to turn that into a pull request if anyone is interested.

A more sophisticated version of this might take administrators to a new page where the only editable field is for keywords. It might be possible on this page to show administrators other terms currently in our keywords database that are already in use and that are similar to those currently selected with this project, together with their frequency of usage.

I have not yet done any work on developing a "show me a list of similar keywords that are currently in use" type function.
